

The song I chose to actively listen to is "8" by Billie Eilish. The mediums I chose to listen to it on were by bluetooth from my MacBook Pro on my AirPods, and out loud on a record player. Listening through bluetooth sounded more clear, by means of both the enclosed sound from the AirPods and some extra noise from the record player. The noise from the record player slightly muffled the song giving it an analog sound. It was also at a higher pitch coming from the record player. The audio from the AirPods was very clear and there was a decent difference in how deep but rich it sounded; the song includes a lot of sharp cuts and abrupt stops of notes, and they all sounded clear with fine detail.
